

Munaf Ali's Range Developments is funding a hotel in St Kitts by selling the Caribbean island's passports. Reem Mohammed / The National

Buy into his project and get a 'golden' passport

Frank Kane
July 19, 2016 Updated: July 19, 2016 06:42 PM

Related

- UAE property visas: All you need to know
- Passport to overseas success
- UAE residents pay Dh1.4m for a Caribbean passport
- Caribbean premier visits Dubai for unveiling of St Kitts hotel project

Issues of citizenship and nationality have come to the fore in a big way in the post-Brexit world, with many commentators focusing on the negative repercussions for the British, European and global economies.

On the other hand, Munaf Ali, chairman of the hotels group Range Developments, sees this as a unique business opportunity, and has already recorded a spike in interest for his services. "Even before Brexit, there was a lot of demand from British people who don't like paying so much tax. Since the vote, we've seen even more inquiries, but now it's from people who are worried about ease of travel in the Schengen area and Britain. It's very encouraging for us," he says.

Mr Ali, a British-born banker by training of Indian heritage, in effect sells citizenship. He offers the chance to holders of "less valuable" passports to obtain "better" ones that help travel and domicile issues. It is a booming business, especially amid post-Brexit uncertainties.

Many countries "sell" citizenship. In the UK, wealthy foreigners can, after many years and millions of pounds of investment, obtain British citizenship. Portugal and Spain offer similar "golden passport" bargains. The island of Malta, with its lucrative position as a sovereign member of the EU, also offers citizenship, although Brussels has not always been very happy about this.

Mr Ali spotted a rather more esoteric opportunity. The Caribbean islands of St Kitts and Nevis, member states of the British Commonwealth, enjoy the same balmy climate as legendary tourist destinations such as Bermuda, the Bahamas and Cayman Islands. But they suffered from under-development and a lack of investment.

He and his co-founder at Range, Mohammed Asaria, learnt that the St Kitts government had a long-running "citizenship by investment programme". It also had a need for upmarket leisure facilities, especially hotel rooms.

Range had expertise in the hotels business. Mr Ali identified hotels and property as a growth sector almost immediately when he came to Dubai as an executive with Citibank in 2005, and soon set up on his own as a developer. "Dubai was such a dynamic place, and real estate was at the centre of it. But the market here was too crowded, so we started by looking for opportunities abroad."

One project involved the launch of a five-star hotel in Karbala, the pilgrimage destination in Iraq, but security fears and political instability in the country led to an early exit, with Range selling its interest to the contractor in 2013.

The Caribbean opportunity he was simultaneously exploring was far more alluring, and less risky. Hotel industry contacts suggested that the Hyatt group, the global chain renowned for its Park, Grand and Regency brands, wanted to increase its Caribbean presence, and a deal was struck with the Chicago hotelier to develop on a site near St Kitts' Christophe Harbour.

Uniquely, the Range development was to be funded via the sale of St Kitts passports. Investors in the project were able to buy a share in the government-approved scheme, and with it the right to apply for a passport.

About US$600,000 was required for a stake in the hotel development, as well as government processing and due diligence fees, which would get passports for a family of four. Mr Ali says the scheme was 95 per cent taken up as early as 2012.

Investors get an annual yield of about 5 to 6 per cent, and can sell the stake on after a five-year period – while retaining their passports.

The hotel will open next March, and is going unhesitatingly for the higher end of the market. Rooms are available for $900 to $2,400 a night, putting it in the same category as the big luxury developments at Sandy Lane in Bermuda, long a favourite of the wealthy international jet set.

Pages: 1 | 2 | One-page article

+ Add your comment | View all comments ▼

Related

UAE property visas: All you need to know

Passport to overseas success

UAE residents pay Dh1.4m for a Caribbean passport

Caribbean premier visits Dubai for unveiling of St Kitts hotel project

More Travel & Tourism

Future of Turkey's tourism sector in the balance after failed coup

Buy into his project and get a 'golden' passport

Dubai retailer Forever Rose to open hotels in London and GCC

Tourism could take biggest hit from attempted coup in Turkey

MOST VIEWED BUSINESS | ALL

- Buy into his project and get a 'golden' passport
- SellAnyCar.com increases traffic with more UAE car dealers
- More Dubai property deals over first six months – but total value lower
- IMF cuts world economic growth forecast after Brexit vote
- The Dh50m Dubai villa that comes with a Porsche, Range Rover and Rolls-Royce – in pictures
- UAE jobs market bucks sluggish trend for region
- UAE property visas: All you need to know
- Careem teams up with US start-up on driverless pods
- Ipic-Mubadala merger does not have to follow a template
- Brexit to delay Dubai housing market recovery, property broker JLL says

More Most Viewed

Back to the top ▲

Do our monthly challenge for the chance to win some of the 40,000 books we are giving away this year.
2016 YEAR OF READING
www.thenational.ae/uaereads
SCHOLASTIC TheNational.ae

EDITOR'S PICKS

All you need to know as a first-time mortgagor in the UAE

The Debt Panel: UAE expat owes more than Dh1 million despite Dh23,500 salary

Where Abu Dhabi rents have risen and fallen, Q1 2016 – in pictures

Where Dubai rents have risen and fallen, Q1 2016 – in pictures

FOLLOW US

Tweets by @TheNationalUAE

The National @TheNationalUAE
Arabic-speaking doctors urged to lend skills to help Syrian refugees bit.ly/29L7pBa

The National Retweeted
LifeNationalUAE @LifeNationalUAE
Author Derek B Miller on Iraq, books and why refugee camps are a warning to us all: bit.ly/2a7Ayas

FROM THE AUTHOR OF HOWEVER YOU WANT

Embed View on Twitter

SPOTLIGHT

Fethullah Gulen counters coup accusations with harsh words for Erdogan

IMF cuts world economic growth forecast after Brexit vote